

MET 1999 WEATHER BRIEFING (1 credit).

Current (passive verbiage removed):

Stimulates discussion about recent, current and future weather using various data sources including satellites, surface observations, radar, model and upper air data. Underscores the importance of the human element in weather forecasting. Students must attend the weekly weather briefing and participate in a national weather forecasting contest.

Suggested change:

Stimulates discussion about recent, current and future weather using various data sources including satellites, surface observations, radar, model and upper air data. Underscores the importance of the human element in weather forecasting. Students must attend the weekly weather briefing and participate in a national weather forecasting contest. Content varies and course may be repeated for up to three credits.